TEQUILA - Agave Tequilana

Tequila, named after its birthplace in the Jalisco valley, is a regional mezcal crafted from a single agave varietal: A. tequilana Weber, blue variety—better known as blue agave. Protected by a Denomination of Origin, Tequila's production is tightly regulated to preserve its heritage and quality. It comes in two distinct styles: El Valle, cultivated at lower elevations (800–1200m) in darker, mineral-rich soils, and Los Altos, grown at higher altitudes (1800–2200m), celebrated for their vibrant fruit and floral aromatics.

JALISCO - LOS ALTOS (Highlands)

Tequila from the highlands (Los Altos) of Jalisco is made from blue agave grown at higher elevations, typically above 5,000 feet. This region's cooler climate and mineral-rich soil produce agave with sweeter, fruitier flavors, giving highland tequila its characteristic smoothness, bright citrus notes, and complex, aromatic profile.

JALISCO - EL VALLE (Lowlands)

Tequila from the lowlands (Los Valles) of Jalisco is made from blue agave grown in the warmer, arid plains. The soil's rich volcanic ash imparts earthy, robust flavors, resulting in tequilas with more intense, peppery notes, vegetal undertones, and a bold, sometimes smoky character, distinct from highland tequilas.

GUANAJUATO

Tequila from Guanajuato offers a unique twist, known for its spicy, herbal flavor profile. Produced in a region with diverse climates, it's less common than Jalisco but gaining popularity. The agave here thrives in varied conditions, giving Guanajuato tequilas a distinctive edge—bold, complex, and perfect for adventurous drinkers.

Corralejo Anejo	22

NAYARIT

Tequila from Nayarit is smooth and subtle, influenced by the region's coastal climate. The agave here often has a delicate, slightly fruity and herbal flavor with a hint of the ocean breeze. While less well-known than Jalisco, it offers a unique, refreshing tequila experience with distinct character.

Aman Blanco	28

MICHOACÁN

Tequila from Michoacán is known for its earthy, complex flavors, influenced by the region's rich volcanic soil and diverse climates. The agave here tends to have a more robust, rustic profile, with vegetal and smoky notes. It's a hidden gem, offering a unique and flavorful alternative to mainstream tequilas.

TAMAULIPAS & ZACATECAS

Tequila from Tamaulipas and Zacatecas is less common but offers distinctive, earthy flavors. Agave from these regions thrives in arid climates, producing tequilas with a robust, herbal profile. While smaller in production, these tequilas stand out for their bold, rustic characteristics and contribute to tequila's diverse landscape.

MEZCAL

Mezcal refers to any agave-based spirit and can be produced across Mexico, though only certain regions are legally permitted to label their spirits as such. With over 20 distinct agave varieties commonly used, mezcal offers incredible diversity. Much like wine, the final character of mezcal is shaped by its terroir and the artistry of the mezcalero. While the long roasting process before fermentation can lend bold smoky and woody notes, the agave species remains the key to distinguishing the unique flavors of different mezcals.

ESPADIN - Agave Angustifolia

The cornerstone of mezcal production. Its high sugar concentration makes it the most widely cultivated and commercialized agave, accounting for 80-90% of all mezcal production. Known for yielding generous volumes of spirit with a sweeter, full-bodied profile.

CUISHE - Agave Karwinskii

*Most commonly found in Oaxaca and Puebla, the Agave Karwinskii species contains a number of important varieties, with Tobaziche perhaps the most notable. Karwinskii varieties are visually distinct, with a thick, baseball-bat-like heart developing over the 10-plus years the plant takes to mature. Frequently harvested from the wild, these agaves are prized for their distinctive flavor profile, often described as herbal and mineral with a characteristic chalky texture.*

TOBALÁ - Agave Potatorum

A rare and highly prized agave variety, unique in its reproductive strategy, relying solely on bats and birds to disperse its seeds rather than propagating asexually. Found in high-altitude regions, Tosalá matures slowly over 10 to 15 years, yielding small piñas. This limited yield contributes to the exclusivity and high cost of the mezcals it produces, which are celebrated for their complex earthy and fruity flavor profiles.

Artesenal Tobala Mezcal	23

CUPREATA - Agave Cupreata

Commonly found in the state of Guerrero, which neighbors Oaxaca, this agave species shares a visual resemblance to Tosalá but diverges significantly in flavor. While Tosalá is known for its light and floral notes, Cupreata typically offers a robust tropical profile complemented by earthy pepper notes.

Artesenal Cupreata Mezcal	18
Artesenal Cupreata Citrus Mezcal	17

ARROQUEÑO - Agave Americano

A rare and striking agave variety, Arroqueño is notable for its immense size; these majestic plants can grow as tall as 2.5 meters and reach a circumference of 3.5 meters. Taking up to 25 years to mature, they yield massive piñas weighing between 90 and 200 kilograms. Each plant can produce up to 30 bottles of mezcal, which are prized for their floral character and vibrant “green” notes.

Artesenal Arroquenno Mezcal	30
Mal Bien Mexicano Mezcal	25

TEPAZTATE - Agave Marmorata

A revered gem in mezcal production, this agave is celebrated for its rarity and the challenging conditions in which it thrives. Growing in rugged, mountainous terrain, it is notoriously difficult to harvest and cultivate. With the longest maturation cycle of any mezcal-producing agave, it takes 25 to 35 years to mature in the wild, making it an increasingly rare and highly prized species among mezcal enthusiasts.

Bozal Tepaztate Mezcal	29
El Joljorgio Tepeztate Mezcal	46

JABALI - Agave Convallis

Named after the Spanish word for “wild boar,” this agave species makes up just about 1% of all mezcal production. Known for its difficulty in cultivation, it can only be harvested from the wild, and it requires an exceptionally long maturation period. With a low yield and challenging fermentation process, it is a labor-intensive variety to work with. Despite these challenges, the finished mezcal is renowned for its complexity and is considered one of the most revered and sought-after styles in the mezcal world.

Bozal Artesenal Jabali Mezcal	37

SALMIANA - Agave Salmiana

Salmiana Mezcal is a unique spirit made from the Agave Salmiana plant, known for its earthy, herbal flavors and smoky finish. Produced in Oaxaca using traditional methods. It takes approximately 12 to 15 years for an Agave Salmiana to fully mature and be ready for harvest.

The Lost Explorer Salmiana Mezcal	49

TEQUILANA - Agave Tequilana (Azul)

Mezcal Tequilana, also known as Blue Weber Agave, is the same agave used to produce tequila. When distilled as mezcal, it offers a smoky, earthy flavor, distinct from tequila’s cleaner taste. Mezcal Tequilana highlights the agave’s natural sweetness and complexity, showcasing the agave’s versatility in mezcal production.

Derrumbes Tequilana	28

ENSAMBLE - Blend

Mezcal Ensemble is a type of mezcal made by blending different agave varieties, such as Espadín, Tobilá, and others, during the production process. This results in a unique, complex flavor profile that combines the characteristics of each agave, offering a rich, smoky, and aromatic tasting experience.

PECHUGA

The term “Pechuga,” meaning “breast” in Spanish, refers to the distinctive ingredient used in its distillation—typically a raw turkey or chicken breast. This traditional style of mezcal is crafted in small batches, following closely guarded family recipes passed down through generations. The production process is a communal effort, with family members working together to gather seasonal ingredients for the celebratory Pechuga. The result is a mezcal with a unique, rich flavor profile, shaped by both the ingredients and the generations of knowledge behind its creation.

SOTOL

Sotol is a spirit from northern Mexico, primarily produced in the states of Chihuahua, Durango, and Coahuila. Made from the Dasylirion plant, which is not an agave but a desert shrub, sotol varies in flavor based on the region and production methods. The spirit has deep roots in the region's indigenous cultures, and its production is often compared to that of mezcal and tequila, though it has its own distinct characteristics. Sotol is gaining recognition for its complex, earthy flavors and rich history.

RAICILLA

Raicilla, a regional spirit from western Jalisco, comes in two distinct styles based on its production region. Sierra raicilla, made in the mountainous municipalities of Mascota and San Sebastián del Oeste, differs from coastal raicilla, which originates in Cabo Corrientes. Coastal raicilla is known for its unique agave varieties and production methods. The culture surrounding raicilla closely mirrors that of tequila from 300 years ago.
